UNITED STATES AT CRISIS; ISSUE TO SHAPE FUTURE WORLD POLIC

10 Demands Made By Anthracite Men On Capital Today

Shorter Houres, Advance in Wages, Recognition of Union, 2 Year Agreement, Improvements Wanted.

DENUNCIATION OF DISMISSAL OF NEARING

YOUNG ERTLE TO FIGHT CHAMPION.

St. Paul, Sept. 10.—What promises to be the best boxing show pulled off hereabouts in a long time will be staged in the auditorium tomorrow night by the Capitol City Boxing Club. The main event will be a ten round clash between "Kid" Williams, the bantamweight champion, and Johnny Ertle, the St. Paul bantam who has been coming to the front recently at a lively rate. Williams naturally rules favorite, but the local fighter has many admirers who believe he will be able to give the champion a hard tussle for the decision.

Wilkesbarre, Sept. 10.—The scale committee of the tri-district convention of anthracite miners reproted today, submitting ten separate demands to the delegates. An eight hour day, twenty per cent. advance in wages, recognition of the union, a modification of the present method of settling disputes, a two year agreement, and general improvements of the working conditions represented the demands embodied in the drafted schedule.

A scathing denunciation of the trustees of the University of Pennsyivala for dismissing Prof. Scot Nearing was adopted this afternoon by the convention. The resolution calls for the appointment of a committee of three, one delegate from each district, to call on Gov. Brumbaugh to request him to exercise his executive power or appropriations to with-hold state moneys from the University of Pennsylvania until that institution becomes really representaive of the people of the state. Nearing was the only pro-labor member of the faculty.

GERMANS FIGHTING FRANCE WITH LIQUID FIRE GAS BOMBS

Mountain Slopes in Alsace Scene of Furious Fighting During Last Night.

Impetuous Attack by Allies Hurls Enemy Out of Captured Works—Spraying Streams of Liquid Fire Shot Over Men.

(By United Press)

Paris, Sept. 10.—With liquid fire, gas bombs and heavy artillery, the Germans are violently attacking the French positions in Alsace and the Vosges mountains, it was officially reported this afternoon. The mountain slopes west of Colmar were the scene of furious fighting throughout the night. The Teutons lost heavily in efforts to drive the French from their positions. At one point the Germans drove the French from their treches on the lower slopes by spraying streams of fiery liquid over them. An impetuous attack by the French hurled the enemy out of the captured works with heavy losses. The Germans continued artillery attacks in the Arras and Champagne region and their infantry attacked in the Argonne region.

BEGINNING TO MAKE GERMANS OUT OF POLISH SUBJECTS

In the wake of the German armies there the being established German schools for the instruction of the conquered people. Evidently, the powers that be in Germany, believe that by getting the younger generation at the right time, they will Germanize them thoroughly, and in time makethem good subjects, loyal and true to their new ruler the kaiser. The photograph shows the idea in action. A group of Polish children are seen here in one of the open-air schools receiving instructions from their German school-masters. The instructor has just asked them a question in German and a number of the eager scholars who think they know the answer are seen with their hands raised, ready to tell what thye know. Were it not for these schools, it is feared that the children would be neglected, so far as education is concerned, as the majority of the school masters of their native tongue are engaged in combating the German invasion.

CZAR ATTMPTS TO DECEIVE PEOPLE

False Reports of Victories Officially Declared

Berlin, Sept. 10.— The Russian claims of important victories in the southeast on the assumption by the czar of leadership of the Russian armies were today officially declared to be untrue. "The czar is attempting to deceive his own people to suppress the growing feeling of revolt," was stated by the government officials. "The important victory before Tarnopol belongs in the same class with the recent Russian naval victory in the gulf of Riga."

ENROLLNENT OF 1647 SHOWS BIG GAIN IN SCHOOLS

Assembly Room Will Not Hold All of The High School Classes

Formerly Held Part of Grades—Efficient Faculty Teaches Different Branches—Glance at Figures of Increase Shows Wisdom of New Building.

The enrollment of the public schools this year has greatly exceeded all expectations, the greatest increase being in the high school. The total enrollment of the grades and high school is 1647, 400 of which are in the high school. This gives an increase of 65 over last year's enrollment in the high school alone. The increase in the grade schools is not in so large a proportion but still is of sufficient size to warrant the provision of greater accomodations.

It is not readily realized that only six years ago the assembly room in the present high school building held not only the four classes of the high school but the entire eighth grade as well, while now it is impossible to seat more than the three upper classes in this same room, it being necessary to place the freshmen in different rooms on the first floor. This allows room for only one small division of the eigth grade in the building where formerly there were high school, eighth, seventh, sixth and first grades. Nothing could be more conclusive proof of the wisdom of our school board in providing a new building than a plain statement of such conditions.

The enrollment in the separate buildings is as follows: high school building, 452; Market Street, 340; fourth ward, 338; third ward, 445; Reedsville, 74. Aside from these figures there are a large number of pupils in our township schools who annually add to our high school enrollment.

A very efficient faculty consisting of 12 members, four of whom are new this year, teach the different branches of high school work. By closest selection our superintendent and board have chosen teachers who are competent in their particular subjects. By selections as well as improvements in text books and other equipment the school has in late years become widely known and rated by colleges all over the country as a school of the first class.

Germany Involved In Circumstances Of Dumba Situatio

Demand on Austria for Dumba's R[illegible] Linked With Shallow Note of Excuses on Arabic.

OPEN BREAK WITH AUSTRIA POSSIBL[illegible]

WASHINGTON, SEPT. 10.—A NEW CRISIS IN AMERICA'S [illegible] TIONS WITH TWO GREAT ALLIED POWERS, AUSTRIA AND [illegible] MANY, WAS REACHED TODAY. THE ISSUES ON WHICH [illegible] UNITED STATES' FUTURE POSITION IN WORLD'S [illegible] HUNG WERE: FIRST. THE DEMAND UPON AUSTRIA FOR A[illegible] SADOR DUMBA'S RECALL. SECOND. GERMANY'S UNSATI[illegible] TORY AND DISAPPOINTING NOTE ON THE ARABIC INCIDE[illegible]

Officials admitted that the two disputes were linked. Germany is involved in the circumstances leading to the Dumba situation. [illegible] support of Germany in any diplomatic disagreement over the Arabic [illegible] is taken for granted.

An open break with Austria and retirement of Ambassador Pu[illegible] from Vienna was deemed possible if Austria supports Dumba's [illegible] of a war strike by Austria Hungarians employed in American's war [illegible] plies plants.

Germany point blank refused to admit responsibility for American lives lost on the Arabic and presumably in other similar affairs. Though coupled with a qualified offer to submit the mtater of financial reparation to arbitration at The Hague was recognized as presenting a new obstacle in the way of settlement of the dispute concerning submarine warfare.

Secretary Lansing stated today that the United States will wait a "reasonable time" for Austria to comply with the request for Dumba's removal. The intimation was plain that this government is prepared to hand Dumba his passport if Austria does not respond, but is confident that such action will not be necessary.

There was good ground for belief that the Austrian government will back up Dumba and force more serious issues than merely the elimination of this envoy. The administration confidently hopes, however, that Vienna will comply with the request to recall Ambassador Dumba. To this end steps have been taken to secure for him a safe conduct through the allies' lines to his native country.

Prompt action is expected from Vienna. The request for Dumba's retirement is already in the Austrian foreign office's hands. An answer within 48 hours because of the possibility that Austria may respond quickly to prevent more grievous rupture was looked for.

It was considered possible that to avoid a further breach with this country, Austria would merely register her displeasure and moral support of Dumba's plan by failing to appoint a successor, although withdrawing Dumba.

Berlin, Sept. 10.—A messenger from the German foreign office delivered to Ambassador Gerard a second note on the submarine question at nine o'clock last night. The contents of the note have not been given out at eleven a. m. today. What the subject of this second communication might be is a mystery. It was stated on good authority that it does not concern the sinking of the Hesperian. One report was that the second note is supplemetary to the note already sent to Washington dealing with the Arabic case. The Arabic note was given to the Berlin newspapers for publication in afternoon editions today. The early editions contained the text of the note without editorial comment.

Liverpool, Sept. 10.—In view of the statement contained in the German note to America, the White Star liner officers here today reiterated the previous denial of the German report that the liner Arabic tried to ram the submarine than sank her. Neither the Arabic captain nor any of her officers saw the submarine, it was stated, and the liner to have attempted an attack.

A TEMPEST IN A TEAPOT.

According to recent gossip drifting out of Philadelphia, there was really nothing in the great motion-picture spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," to object to, but the suppression of this biggest of all photo-plays by the political authorities was confidently expected because an election for mayor is approaching and the dominant political party, if threatened with the loss of negro votes, would respond to the slightest protest and cause prompt action to be taken. After the first performance, however, it looked as if the unexpected was not likely to happen, for the Philadelphia Press, which represents the dominant political party, saw fit to praise "The Birth of a Nation" almost extravagantly, reporting that there was nothing "even tending to excite racial prejudice" in a "wonderful masterpiece" which brought forth "outbursts of patriotic applause," even the "sprinkling of colored spectators joining the whites" therein.

The astute observer at a distance begins to wonder whether the tempest in a teapot stirred up over this picture spectacle in several cities is merely a shrewd advertising scheme or self-seeking effort of designing politicians, and whether the negroes, if let alone, would really find ground for complaint. In any case, why should the "Afro-Americans" of the Northern cities in our time consider themselves responsible for the crimes or follies of the ignorant ex-slaves of the South when these were placed in control of the Southern state governments through the temporary disfranchisement of a majority of white voters? Why should anybody object to a historical pictures of the efforts of a "Ku Klux Klan" to frighten the blacks and thus grapple with an intolerable situation in the only way then possible? If such a spectacle must be forbidden, then there is no room on the stage for "The Merchant of Venice" or any other play that may be unwelcome to a relatively small element of the public in a given community.

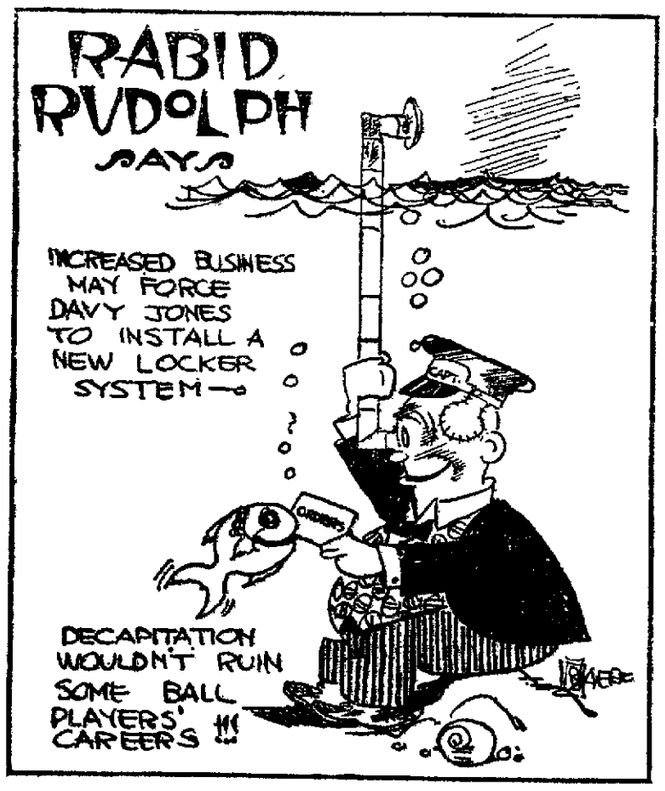

THE ALLEGED PEACE TERMS

If the Teutons want peace, from their point of view the present would seem to be a favorable time to propose terms. Apparently little progress has been made in the difficult Dardanelles campaign, and for three months the allies on the western front have accomplished nothing further than the stubborn holding of their lines. On the east front meanwhile the Austro-German army has steadily gained ground. The Russians have lost their last hold on Galicia and have suffered one serious disaster after another, their retreating armies even being reported as crippled.

Under such circumstances the suggestion of peace is inevitable. Whether the German government has inspired discussion as a "feeler" both at home and abroad, or whether the alleged terms are the mere guesses of enterprising journalists, they are interesting enough to receive attention. According to current report, Germany would be disposed to accept peace on the following terms: Russia must surrender both her part of old Poland and Courland, which gives her an outlet on the Baltic, and grant autonomy to Finland. France must cede to Germany her immense African possessions in payment for Germany's retirement from French soil. Although the formal annexation of Belgium was reported some time ago, that country will be restored to its people if they will surrender to Germany the vast section of Africa known as the Congo State. Servian soverignty must become extinct by the division of that country between Austria and Bulgaria. The terms offered England are less clear. Apparently Breat Britain is allowed to keep her empire intact, but must surrender into Germany's keeping the "freedom of the seas"—a term that seems to be as vague as the proposition itself. As the seas were "free" enough during many years before the war began to enable Germany—with a navy vastly inferior to that of England—to build up an enormous foreign commerce, it would appear that the kind of new freedom demanded must in some way involve the end of British naval supremacy. Finally there is a very indefinite mention of an indemnity to reimburse Germany for the cost of her military operations."

Whether such terms are pure fabrications or are based on hints unofficially given forth by the kaiser's government, their impossibility would be manifest even without reports to the effect that they have excited derision in all the countries of the allies. Even the Russian defeats and all the exhibitions of Germany's marvelous military efficiency do not in any measure justify such proposals. Russia may be temporarily crippled, but in all other respects the war is wholly indecisive and still to be fought out. It stands to reason that, without actual defeat, the allies will not be disposed toward peace until the Germans have at least been driven back upon their own soil.

Of course they still expect to accomplish this if no [illegible] the history of most wars, praticularly the long [illegible] supports such expectation. Many times in the past [illegible] nation best prepared for war accomplished great things in the beginning—and in the beginning only. Superior numbers and resources, when at last made available and effective, have rarely failed of triumph in the end.

Today's Geographic Study of The Great European War Zone

Washington, Sept. 10.—While the soldiers of Europe are putting the facts of the political geography of their continent through a kaleidoscopic jig, the final adjustments of a magnificant change in the physical geography in Central America brought about by United States engineers are taking place. The interesting features connected with this man-conducted metamorphosis in the Isthmiam world's surface, the creation of an inland sea, the drowning of a tropical jungle, and the enforced migration of a swarm of jungle life from the valley bottom to the hills—as depicted by George Shiras, 3rd, in a communication to the National Geographic society—is told in the following bulletn:

"Gatum Lake is not only the largest fresh-water lake ever created by man—a navigable viaduct almost bridging the two oceans and reached by terminal elevators in the form of locks—but, in addition, a vast reservoir for the adjoining water-sheds, assuring throughout the year a sufficient water supply for the operation of the locks, for electric power, for the establishment of inland fisheries, and for portable and other domestic uses. The lake, much larger than the one that the French intended to construct, also allows greater freedom and speed to the vessels using the canal, and permits local navigation of many of the jungle valleys.

"When the long embankment at the north end was closed, thus stopping the only gap that nature had left in the rim of hills, the inland waters began covering the lowlands, creeping up the wild tangled valleys, drowning the mighty forests and the rank tropical jungles, flooding out native villages and destroying scattered plantations, marooning wild creatures like the monkey, ocelet, peccary, armadillo, and the sloth on hill tops unexpectedly converted into permanent islands, submerging the mud flats of the heron and the ibis, driving the deer, the jaguar, the tapir, iguanas, the monster snakes through the rising waters to less hampered retreats, and opening up a new and larger home for the swamp alligator and the stream-confined fish.

"Here all the centuries-long process of the sinking of the land and the rising of the waters was enacted in a fascinating nature-drama of a few months. Gatum Lake, at a surface elevation of 85 feet, is estimated to cover 164 square miles, and extends not merely over the previously existing swampy ground of the Chagres Valley, but it has risen so far above the floor of the lowlands as to extend for miles between the hills, forming estuaries, lagoons, and ponds, turning rapid, unnavigable streams into deep, sluggish rivers, and converting hilltops into beautiful islands, some of them miles in length, while thousands of acres of flooded and fallen timber, into which stretch or circle narrow necks of land, practically defy any accurate estimate of the secalled shore-line of the new lake.

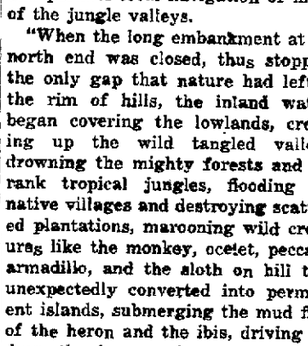

"No one yet accurately knows the size and shape of the new lake. Much of its far-reaching, irregular surface is veiled by whole forests which break through its waters, a dying jungle-barrier to a knowledge of the inland sea. When these obstructing forests and bushes are at last destroyed by the warm waters of the flood and permanent fringes of bamboo and other semi-aquatic growths mark the line of the shore, then the heretofore half shrouded lake will glisten, near and far, in the tropic lights, while the surrounding shores, each bay and promontory, and the islands, big and little, will stand out sharply defined. It will then be difficult to realize that this lake is the work of man.

"As the lake swelled from a pond into a sea, the Indians of Panama saw all their notions of inland navigation swept by the board. They had been accustomed to poling or paddling in the swiftest streams in their cayuca, or dug-out, but they found that no one among them knew how to handle the canoe under the new conditions brought about by the lake.

"The Indians, however, were the least of sufferers caused by the magic appearance of the lake. There are forests of fine tree slowly dying, as is a luxurious mass of jungle plant-life. On many of the trees are great pendant termtie nests filled with restless ant-like creatures doomed to slow starvation. And, besides, many animals have suffered the fate of being marooned and slowly starved. The coming of the lake has worked a considerable damage upon the life that was there before, but, unlike the changes wrought in European geography, this change will be permanent, its utility, its comfort to a readjusted plant and animal world, and its tropical beauties, in all liklihood, will be lasting on through many rearrangements of imperial boundaries."

ONE YEAR AGO THE GERMAN ARMY WAS ROUTED IN FRANCE

After Getting Within Sight of Paris The Invaders Hurled Back In Disorder

General Joffre's Brillianet Manuevers Turn the Tide of Fight Which Come Upon the Nation When Unprepared —Review of Correspondent.

BY WILLIAM PHILIP SIMMS
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Paris, Sept. 10, 1914.—The German army is in full retreat. The allied forces are everywhere victorious. After getting within sight of Paris and when it seemed that nothing on earth could stop their drive, the invaders have been hurled back in disorder and the capital is safe.

With a recklessness bordering on impudence, the result of seeing fortress after fortress surrender merely before the menace of their approach, the Prussians, ignored the reserves they must have known were massed here, turned eastward from Paris expecting to crush a weak and routed enemy. In so doing they uncovered their right and General Maunoury struck. Surprised, dazed almost, they turned to face the new enemy wthen again they were hit on the flank, this time by General French, of the British; Franchet d'Esperey, of the Fifth; Foch of the Ninth Reserves, and the rest.

Von Kluck and Von Buelow, commanding the German right, were staggered. They fought desperately and tried to rally their armies but Foch, teacher of tactics at St. Cyr, the French West Point, outmaneuvered them, drove a murderous wedge into their lines an dsent them back almost in panic under a storm of French 75 shells.

The German "battle without a tomorrow," has failed. The morrow is here and with it signal defeat. The Battle of the Marne is over and the French have won.

In Paris the news was hailed as the announcement of a miracle. Each day some 40,000 or 50,000f people had abandoned the city, expecting the immediate entrance of the Germans. It was known that the kaiser's legions were near and advancing 20 and 30 miles a day. The French and British seemed powerless to check them and an irredeemable disaster appeared inevitable.

To the few, however, sharing the confidence of General Joseph Joffre, the French commander-in-chief, the victory is gratifying but not surprising. It comes as the logical result of his plans made immediately after Charleroi.

When war was declared Joffre knew he would have to face what the Germans called a "brusked attack." Just where this would come he had no idea. Adopting one of Napoleon's maxims "to engage everywhere, then see'," he spread out his men and endeavored to obtain contact with the enemy. The mass move came through Belgium and Luxembourg, the point least expected, with the result that Joffre's reserves were a long way off. Greatly outnumbered and without sufficient time to bring up reinforcements, Joffre, who felt the enemy's strength at Charleroi, determined to fall back towards his reserves while his reserves advanced to meet him. Furthermore he profited by the lessons of 1870 which were distinctly to effect that conquered territory may be redeemed but a beaten army ends all hope. No matter what happened, he resolved to keep the armies intact; to refuse all offers of battle until such a time as he deemed the chances were in his favor. Not even to save Paris would he allow himself to engage in a decisive struggle if he felt the moment had not come.

Hoping the favorable moment might come somewhere along the Champagne tablelands, Joffre started the formation of a new army at Ameins. This was the Ninth army, under General Maunoury. The trains transporting this army moved only at night and, I am told by staff officers, the Germans were not aware of its formation.

But the German advance was too rapid. The new army was not more than half formed when Amiens had to be abandoned. Lille, Arras, and most of Northern France was overrun so, again by night the army of Maunoury hastened back to Paris where its enrollment was completed.

September 3 the Germans were in sight of the capital. [illegible] was a few miles to the [illegible] while their line continued on southeastward, eastward and northeastward. Uhlan patrols reached the [illegible] to the southeast of Paris and [illegible] a few miles of the Seine to the northwest.

The German general staff had to decide whether they would take Paris immediately, or to [illegible] and crush an army which they believed to be demoralized, routed and incapable of serious opposition. They chose the latter alternative—the only proper one from a military point of view, for with the allied army crushed Paris would fall like ripe fruit into the first hand that shook the tree.

So, instead of continuing directly southward and entering Paris, Von Kluck's army in conjunction with Von Buelow's army turned eastward to deliver the knockout blow.

Joffre's longed-looked-for minute had come. His air scouts reported thatVon Kluck's masses had faced the east and that Von Buelow's were pouring across the Marne at many points. He sent for Sir John French, commanding the British. The British, in the forest of Crecy and extending eastward toward Coulommiers, would kepe in touch with the Fifth army under d'Esperey. Other army commanders were ordered to begin their attack at dawn September 6. Joffre, in his order of the day, concluding with:

"An army which can no longer advance, must hold; and if it can not hold, must die."

At daybreak on the 6th Maunoury's reserves struck, full in Von Kluck's flank. Evidently the latter's intelligence department had failed signally.

Had he known of the presence of Maunoury's army in and north of Paris, and at least eight divisions strong, he would not have dared turn his flank to it the way he did. I am told he thought, as did Von Buelow, that there was only one army in Paris and that it would be held for the capital's defense. As a matter of fact there were two—the army of Paris and the army of Maunoury.

In the meantime the British, with five infantry divisions and five brigades of cavalry, were moving northeastward with comparatively little resistance. By night they had reached a position astride the Grand Morin, their right being at Dagny, on the Aubetin River.

Further east the fighting had been much hotter for here it was a frontal attack. D'Esperey had to carve his way forward and he did not get far on the 6th. He had against him the bulk of Von Kluck's army; the Westphalians, Hanoverians and Brandenburghers. Foch, with his Ninth reserves, east of d'Esperey not only had Von Buelow opposing him but the right wing of Von Hauson's Saxons. The Duke of Wurtemberg met attack with attack when Langle's Fourth army struck at him near Vitry and did his best to break through. The result was a standstill fight.

Sarrail, around Verdun, had been less lucky, for the German Crown Crown Prince and the Crown Prince of Bavaria struck with all their might hoping to take Verdun, the forts along the Heights of the Meuse and so turn the French right. They gained some ground, though they failed in their greater task.

On the 7th the fighting was resumed more fiercely tha never. Maunoury's flanking movement went forward with a dash and the British were carried along with it. The plateaus along the River Ourcq were piled high with German dead. Elsewhere, despite desperate attacks the French merely held their own.

The 8th seems to have been the critical day. Maunoury kept up his advance with the British on his right while Foch saw the opening for his wedge. During the night he continued his manouvres so that at dawn on the 9th he was pounding away at a large gap between Von Hausen and Von Buelow, at the same time, with his left he, too struck at Von Buelows right, uncovered by Maunoury and the British.

The retreat of Von Beulow imposes. Caught in a pocket only a rapid retirement could save him and his army. This he did very cleverly. Staff officers declare only a genius could have extricated himself, for, at times, under violent shell fire from the French 3-inch rapid-fire field pieces, his troops showed signs of panic.

The retreat of Von Kluck was followed by that of Von Buelow and the other commanders eastward to the Voges. The German army is expected to make a stand on the Aisne, north of which a high tableland offers what is considered one of the greatest defenses in Europe. Unless they hold there it is believed they will lose all they have gained.

ONE CENT A MEAL FOR ONE YEAR.

In almost every house there are practically one thousand meals a year prepared on the stove. Many people hesitate about paying five or ten dollars more to secure a reliable range—one that will cook these thousand meals a year with the least trouble and at the lowest cost. If you should add one cent to the cose of every meal for the first year only, you would soon make up the difference between the cheap range and the range that will last a lifetime.

Suppose your cheap range uses one cents more of fuel in cooking each meal, or only three cents' worth more a day. In one year this range has cost you ten dollars extra—ten dollars more for fuel than the better range. Every year, means that much more money burned up.

Suppose the better range does cost ten dollars more at first than the cheap one. The extra cost is nothing—it amounts to only one cent a meal. It will save you one cent a meal in fuel alone. In one year it will save the extra cost, and in ten years it will save you one hundred dollars, not counting what you save missing big repair bills.

You can open a bank account in your [illegible] by buying a South Bend Malleable Range.

An expert demonstrator from the factory will be at our store for one week. He will tell you about the Patented Aluminum-Fused Copper-Bearing Flues. And prove to you why it is the best range made.

On account of the many showers that have been passing over Curwensville the past several days only a small number attended the Labor Day celebration here, although some people came from Mahaffey, Lumber City and Grampian. The I. O. O. F. had charge of the program and preparation had been made to welcome the visitors in a fitting way. Several showers during the day would not permit the carrying out of the complete program.

The trap shoot at the Athletic Park at two o'clock resulted in the following score:

The ball game between Mahaffey Curwensville at three o'clock was called in the first of the fifth inning on account of rain. The score at that time was Mahaffey, 3; Curwensville 1.

Both Madden and Strickland were doing good work and well supported with the exception of several errors made by Curwensville. The largest crowd of the season had turned out to see the game. The band concerts in the main part of town throughout the day were also heard by large crowds.

A hamburg supper will be held in the Presbyterian Church by the ladies of that church nert Thursday evening, starting at five o'clock.

NEW FALL BLOUSES REVIEWED BY MISS MARGARET MASON

Unique Models of Stunning Waistshade of Combination of Materials

BY MARGARET MASON

Written for the United Press

"Is it a waste, the maiden said,
To buy a lovely waist of red,
That's made of many yards of mull?"
Sure such a waist full can't be wasteful.

New York, Sept. 10.—The new fall blouses are rightly designated for few and far between are the females who won't fall for them. Such exquisitness is their as has never been before or behind either for they are much ornamented in the rear.

They are more bouffant for one thing and require divers lengths of diaphonons material to complete their sheer entirety. Georgette crepe, chiffon, and crepe de chine continue to be the favorite materials. Fur, lace and metalic embroideries are the favord garnishments.

One unique model of white crepe de chine is absolutely plain in front with a deep sailor collar of white silk plush in the back that is edged with a fringe of sassy little black and white ermine tails. The long sleeves are caught together at the cuff with a single tiny tail and there you are—the tail of this blouse is ended.

A stunning blous for an elderly woman, (if there is any such thing) is of grey chiffon and black lace with a banding of skunk around the neck and down each side of the front to the bust line. The sleeves which have a cap top of lace and full undersleeves of the chiffon are cuffed in the fur. The lace is set in the back to form a point from the shoulders to the waist line and in front extends from the shoulders straight down each side of the fur bands.

Combinations of materials and of two colors are distinctly smart. Of those that seek their contrasting color in fur the white waists combined with skunk and the yellow with skung are perhaps the loviest.

Chiffon and velvet waists are also rich and effective. A Russian green velvet waist with sleeves and yoke of the same shade of chiffon has for sole adornment a choker collar of bear with a greenish gold metalic rose snugling coyly on the left side.

A vivid striped velvet of grey, black scarlet and yellow has a high collar of astrakan and the long flaring bell sleeves are deeply banded with the same.

The colored waists of Jersey silk promise but a dubious following for fall although the fur trimmed sweaters of heavy wool or silk have been shaken off of the summer gull's fair shoulders only to descend gracefully and fittingly upon Miss Autumn. They are sure to be decidely smart wel lup into November for wear with tailor made skirts of serve, velvet and even taffeta. For yes, taffeta is to be a fall fabric this year as well as a perennial spring one.

Quite the cleverest of the tailored coat suits are fashioned of this silk and combined with fur to give them a bit more stability.

Although military styles and trench fashions are trying to retrench they have suffered almost a total defeat in the autumn mode encounters.

With the exception of the prevalence of Russian coats, turbanded and full skirted a la Cossack, and a gleaming gold tassel or so a la Belgian officer little or no militarism has been allowed to gain headway against the lines of the allied a la modes.

It certainly brooks much for fashionable peace that the awful slaught of military helmets, turbans, Highland bonnets ad Belgian caps has been stayed and female headgear is once more staid again also. That is of course it is as circumspect as feminine head gear could ever be. Really very little exaggeration is shown as yet in the fall hat models and either the close fitting little round and tricorn shapes of velvet are effected or the ultra large round floppy velvet shapes. A one color scheme has gripped the little hat and add and bizarre shades have been evolved to meet the needs of a one toned hat that will at the same time be sufficiently striking.

Royal purple, mahogany and a bright Prussian blue are a few of the colors used and a variation on the ever popular cerise is also offered. So vivid are some of the hues that it is going to be mighty hard for more man to pass the hats this fall without adding blinders to his other recenny acquired fashionable accessory, the wrist watch.

EXPECTS GERMANY'S APPROVAL OF [illegible]

(By United Press)

Berlin, Sept. 10.—Germany confidently expects America's approval on the Arabic note handed to Ambassador Gerard Monday night for transmission to America. They believe the contention that the U. boat commander expected to be rammed by the White Star liner and fired his torpedo in defense will meet with a favorable reception both in America and in Germany. The German people will regard it with favor, officials believe, since they have felt all along that submarine activities must not be curtailed because of the inroads submarines have made on the British sea power.

UNITED STATES AT CRISIS; ISSUE TO SHAPE FUTURE WORLD POLIC

10 Demands Made By Anthracite Men On Capital Today

Shorter Houres, Advance in Wages, Recognition of Union, 2 Year Agreement, Improvements Wanted.

DENUNCIATION OF DISMISSAL OF NEARING

YOUNG ERTLE TO FIGHT CHAMPION.

St. Paul, Sept. 10.—What promises to be the best boxing show pulled off hereabouts in a long time will be staged in the auditorium tomorrow night by the Capitol City Boxing Club. The main event will be a ten round clash between "Kid" Williams, the bantamweight champion, and Johnny Ertle, the St. Paul bantam who has been coming to the front recently at a lively rate. Williams naturally rules favorite, but the local fighter has many admirers who believe he will be able to give the champion a hard tussle for the decision.

(By United Press)

Wilkesbarre, Sept. 10.—The scale committee of the tri-district convention of anthracite miners reproted today, submitting ten separate demands to the delegates. An eight hour day, twenty per cent. advance in wages, recognition of the union, a modification of the present method of settling disputes, a two year agreement, and general improvements of the working conditions represented the demands embodied in the drafted schedule.

A scathing denunciation of the trustees of the University of Pennsyivala for dismissing Prof. Scot Nearing was adopted this afternoon by the convention. The resolution calls for the appointment of a committee of three, one delegate from each district, to call on Gov. Brumbaugh to request him to exercise his executive power or appropriations to with-hold state moneys from the University of Pennsylvania until that institution becomes really representaive of the people of the state. Nearing was the only pro-labor member of the faculty.

GERMANS FIGHTING FRANCE WITH LIQUID FIRE GAS BOMBS

Mountain Slopes in Alsace Scene of Furious Fighting During Last Night.

Impetuous Attack by Allies Hurls Enemy Out of Captured Works—Spraying Streams of Liquid Fire Shot Over Men.

(By United Press)

Paris, Sept. 10.—With liquid fire, gas bombs and heavy artillery, the Germans are violently attacking the French positions in Alsace and the Vosges mountains, it was officially reported this afternoon. The mountain slopes west of Colmar were the scene of furious fighting throughout the night. The Teutons lost heavily in efforts to drive the French from their positions. At one point the Germans drove the French from their treches on the lower slopes by spraying streams of fiery liquid over them. An impetuous attack by the French hurled the enemy out of the captured works with heavy losses. The Germans continued artillery attacks in the Arras and Champagne region and their infantry attacked in the Argonne region.

BEGINNING TO MAKE GERMANS OUT OF POLISH SUBJECTS

In the wake of the German armies there the being established German schools for the instruction of the conquered people. Evidently, the powers that be in Germany, believe that by getting the younger generation at the right time, they will Germanize them thoroughly, and in time makethem good subjects, loyal and true to their new ruler the kaiser. The photograph shows the idea in action. A group of Polish children are seen here in one of the open-air schools receiving instructions from their German school-masters. The instructor has just asked them a question in German and a number of the eager scholars who think they know the answer are seen with their hands raised, ready to tell what thye know. Were it not for these schools, it is feared that the children would be neglected, so far as education is concerned, as the majority of the school masters of their native tongue are engaged in combating the German invasion.

LOCAL DELEGATE REPORTS LAST EVE OF W.C.T.U. MEET

Traveling Speaker of Suffrage Union Gives A Very Interesting Talk.

Representative to Osceola Convenion Makes Report on Important Incidents--Shows Increased Membership Next Meeting Will be Held on 23d.

Last evening the Womens Christian Temperance union, of Clearfield, held a most interesting and instructive meeting in the parlor of the Y. M. C. A. Addresses by members and the report of the delegate to the county convention which was held at Osceola last week occupied most of the time.

Miss Howard, traveling speaker for the State Suffrage union delivered a very interesting and instructive address on suffrage. This was followed by a talk on the Osceola convention and county work by the former county president, Mrs. S. C. Wilson. Mrs. Lambert the presiding officer read a letter from Mr. Lanning of the state W. C .T. U. in which he accepted the invitation to deliver an address here in October under the auspices of the town organization.

Mrs. Fred Irwin the delegate to the Osceola convention gave a very interesting report in which she dwelt at length on the most important occurences of the convention. She reported that the county organization has increased its membership to 900. She mentioned especially the franchise symposium given by Mrs. Mattern of Osceola. Mrs. Mattern is a most forcible speaker, and all who heard her speak enjoyed her witty and humorous remarks. The next meeting of the organization will be held Thursday, the 23d of September at which time important business matters will be discussed.

CZAR ATTMPTS TO DECEIVE PEOPLE

False Reports of Victories Officially Declared

Berlin, Sept. 10.— The Russian claims of important victories in the southeast on the assumption by the czar of leadership of the Russian armies were today officially declared to be untrue. "The czar is attempting to deceive his own people to suppress the growing feeling of revolt," was stated by the government officials. "The important victory before Tarnopol belongs in the same class with the recent Russian naval victory in the gulf of Riga."

ENROLLNENT OF 1647 SHOWS BIG GAIN IN SCHOOLS

Assembly Room Will Not Hold All of The High School Classes

Formerly Held Part of Grades—Efficient Faculty Teaches Different Branches—Glance at Figures of Increase Shows Wisdom of New Building.

The enrollment of the public schools this year has greatly exceeded all expectations, the greatest increase being in the high school. The total enrollment of the grades and high school is 1647, 400 of which are in the high school. This gives an increase of 65 over last year's enrollment in the high school alone. The increase in the grade schools is not in so large a proportion but still is of sufficient size to warrant the provision of greater accomodations.

It is not readily realized that only six years ago the assembly room in the present high school building held not only the four classes of the high school but the entire eighth grade as well, while now it is impossible to seat more than the three upper classes in this same room, it being necessary to place the freshmen in different rooms on the first floor. This allows room for only one small division of the eigth grade in the building where formerly there were high school, eighth, seventh, sixth and first grades. Nothing could be more conclusive proof of the wisdom of our school board in providing a new building than a plain statement of such conditions.

The enrollment in the separate buildings is as follows: high school building, 452; Market Street, 340; fourth ward, 338; third ward, 445; Reedsville, 74. Aside from these figures there are a large number of pupils in our township schools who annually add to our high school enrollment.

A very efficient faculty consisting of 12 members, four of whom are new this year, teach the different branches of high school work. By closest selection our superintendent and board have chosen teachers who are competent in their particular subjects. By selections as well as improvements in text books and other equipment the school has in late years become widely known and rated by colleges all over the country as a school of the first class.

Germany Involved In Circumstances Of Dumba Situatio

Demand on Austria for Dumba's R[illegible] Linked With Shallow Note of Excuses on Arabic.

OPEN BREAK WITH AUSTRIA POSSIB[illegible]

WASHINGTON, SEPT. 10.—A NEW CRISIS IN AMERICA'S [illegible] TIONS WITH TWO GREAT ALLIED POWERS, AUSTRIA AND [illegible] MANY, WAS REACHED TODAY. THE ISSUES ON WHICH [illegible] UNITED STATES' FUTURE POSITION IN WORLD'S [illegible] HUNG WERE: FIRST. THE DEMAND UPON AUSTRIA FOR A[illegible] SADOR DUMBA'S RECALL. SECOND. GERMANY'S UNSATI[illegible] TORY AND DISAPPOINTING NOTE ON THE ARABIC INCIDE[illegible]

Officials admitted that the two disputes were linked. Germany is involved in the circumstances leading to the Dumba situation. [illegible] support of Germany in any diplomatic disagreement over the Arabic [illegible] is taken for granted.

An open break with Austria and retirement of Ambassador Pu[illegible] from Vienna was deemed possible if Austria supports Dumba's [illegible] of a war strike by Austria Hungarians employed in American's war [illegible] plies plants.

Germany point blank refused to admit responsibility for American lives lost on the Arabic and presumably in other similar affairs. Though coupled with a qualified offer to submit the mtater of financial reparation to arbitration at The Hague was recognized as presenting a new obstacle in the way of settlement of the dispute concerning submarine warfare.

Secretary Lansing stated today that the United States will wait a "reasonable time" for Austria to comply with the request for Dumba's removal. The intimation was plain that this government is prepared to hand Dumba his passport if Austria does not respond, but is confident that such action will not be necessary.

There was good ground for belief that the Austrian government will back up Dumba and force more serious issues than merely the elimination of this envoy. The administration confidently hopes, however, that Vienna will comply with the request to recall Ambassador Dumba. To this end steps have been taken to secure for him a safe conduct through the allies' lines to his native country.

Prompt action is expected from Vienna. The request for Dumba's retirement is already in the Austrian foreign office's hands. An answer within 48 hours because of the possibility that Austria may respond quickly to prevent more grievous rupture was looked for.

It was considered possible that to avoid a further breach with this country, Austria would merely register her displeasure and moral support of Dumba's plan by failing to appoint a successor, although withdrawing Dumba.

Berlin, Sept. 10.—A messenger from the German foreign office delivered to Ambassador Gerard a second note on the submarine question at nine o'clock last night. The contents of the note have not been given out at eleven a. m. today. What the subject of this second communication might be is a mystery. It was stated on good authority that it does not concern the sinking of the Hesperian. One report was that the second note is supplemetary to the note already sent to Washington dealing with the Arabic case. The Arabic note was given to the Berlin newspapers for publication in afternoon editions today. The early editions contained the text of the note without editorial comment.

Liverpool, Sept. 10.—In view of the statement contained in the German note to America, the White Star liner officers here today reiterated the previous denial of the German report that the liner Arabic tried to ram the submarine than sank her. Neither the Arabic captain nor any of her officers saw the submarine, it was stated, and the liner to have attempted an attack.

A TEMPEST IN A TEAPOT.

According to recent gossip drifting out of Philadelphia, there was really nothing in the great motion-picture spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," to object to, but the suppression of this biggest of all photo-plays by the local authorities was confidently expected because an election for mayor is approaching and the dominant political party, if threatened with the loss of negro votes, would respond to the slightest protest and cause prompt action to be taken. After the first performance, however, it looked as if the unexpected was not likely to happen, for the Philadelphia Press, which represents the dominant political party, saw fit to praise "The Birth of a Nation" almost extravagantly, reporting that there was nothing "even tending to excite racial prejudice" in a "wonderful masterpiece" which brought forth "outbursts of patriotic applause," even the "sprinkling of colored spectators joining the whites" therein.

The astute observer at a distance begins to wonder whether the tempest in a teapot stirred up over this picture spectacle in several cities is merely a shrewd advertising scheme or self-seeking effort of designing politicians, and whether the negroes, if let alone, would really find ground for complaint. In any case, why should the "Afro-Americans" of the Northern cities in our time consider themselves responsible for the crimes or follies of the ignorant ex-slaves of the South when these were placed in control of the Southern state governments through the temporary disfranchisement of a majority of white voters? Why should anybody object to a historical pictures of the efforts of a "Ku Klux Klan" to frighten the blacks and thus grapple with an intolerable situation in the only way then possible? If such a spectacle must be forbidden, then there is no room on the stage for "The Merchant of Venice" or any other play that may be unwelcome to a relatively small element of the public in a given community.

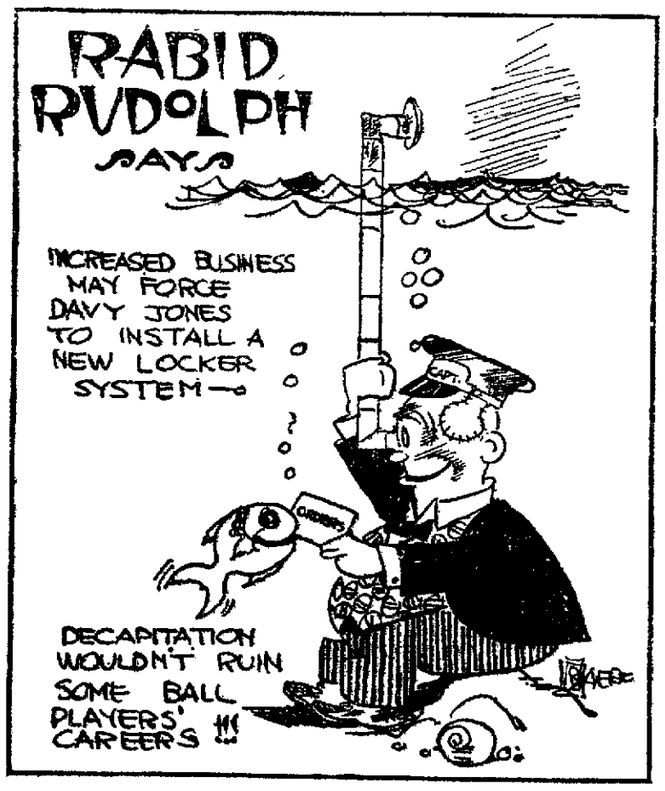

THE ALLEGED PEACE TERMS

If the Teutons want peace, from their point of view the present would seem to be a favorable time to propose terms. Apparently little progress has been made in the difficult Dardanelles campaign, and for three months the allies on the western front have accomplished nothing further than the stubborn holding of their lines. On the east front meanwhile the Austro-German army has steadily gained ground. The Russians have lost their last hold on Galicia and have suffered one serious disaster after another, their retreating armies even being reported as crippled.

Under such circumstances the suggestion of peace is inevitable. Whether the German government has inspired discussion as a "feeler" both at home and abroad, or whether the alleged terms are the mere guesses of enterprising journalists, they are interesting enough to receive attention. According to current report, Germany would be disposed to accept peace on the following terms: Russia must surrender both her part of old Poland and Courland, which gives her an outlet on the Baltic, and grant autonomy to Finland. France must cede to Germany her immense African possessions in payment for Germany's retirement from French soil. Although the formal annexation of Belgium was reported some time ago, that country will be restored to its people if they will surrender to Germany the vast section of Africa known as the Congo State. Servian soverignty must become extinct by the division of that country between Austria and Bulgaria. The terms offered England are less clear. Apparently Breat Britain is allowed to keep her empire intact, but must surrender into Germany's keeping the "freedom of the seas"—a term that seems to be as vague as the proposition itself. As the seas were "free" enough during many years before the war began to enable Germany—with a navy vastly inferior to that of England—to build up an enormous foreign commerce, it would appear that the kind of new freedom demanded must in some way involve the end of British naval supremacy. Finally there is a very indefinite mention of an indemnity to reimburse Germany for the cost of her military operations."

Whether such terms are pure fabrications or are based on hints unofficially given forth by the kaiser's government, their impossibility would be manifest even without reports to the effect that they have excited derision in all the countries of the allies. Even the Russian defeats and all the exhibitions of Germany's marvelous military efficiency do not in any measure justify such proposals. Russia may be temporarily crippled, but in all other respects the war is wholly indecisive and still to be fought out. It stands to reason that, without actual defeat, the allies will not be disposed toward peace until the Germans have at least been driven back upon their own soil.

Of course they still expect to accomplish this if no [illegible] the history of most wars, praticularly the long [illegible] supports such expectation. Many times in the past [illegible] nation best prepared for war accomplished great things in the beginning—and in the beginning only. Superior numbers and resources, when at last made available and effective, have rarely failed of triumph in the end.

Today's Geographic Study of The Great European War Zone

Washington, Sept. 10.—While the soldiers of Europe are putting the facts of the political geography of their continent through a kaleidoscopic jig, the final adjustments of a magnificant change in the physical geography in Central America brought about by United States engineers are taking place. The interesting features connected with this man-conducted metamorphosis in the Isthmiam world's surface, the creation of an inland sea, the drowning of a tropical jungle, and the enforced migration of a swarm of jungle life from the valley bottom to the hills—as depicted by George Shiras, 3rd, in a communication to the National Geographic society—is told in the following bulletn:

"Gatum Lake is not only the largest fresh-water lake ever created by man—a navigable viaduct almost bridging the two oceans and reached by terminal elevators in the form of locks—but, in addition, a vast reservoir for the adjoining water-sheds, assuring throughout the year a sufficient water supply for the operation of the locks, for electric power, for the establishment of inland fisheries, and for portable and other domestic uses. The lake, much larger than the one that the French intended to construct, also allows greater freedom and speed to the vessels using the canal, and permits local navigation of many of the jungle valleys.

"When the long embankment at the north end was closed, thus stopping the only gap that nature had left in the rim of hills, the inland waters began covering the lowlands, creeping up the wild tangled valleys, drowning the mighty forests and the rank tropical jungles, flooding out native villages and destroying scattered plantations, marooning wild creatures like the monkey, ocelet, peccary, armadillo, and the sloth on hill tops unexpectedly converted into permanent islands, submerging the mud flats of the heron and the ibis, driving the deer, the jaguar, the tapir, iguanas, the monster snakes through the rising waters to less hampered retreats, and opening up a new and larger home for the swamp alligator and the stream-confined fish.

"Here all the centuries-long process of the sinking of the land and the rising of the waters was enacted in a fascinating nature-drama of a few months. Gatum Lake, at a surface elevation of 85 feet, is estimated to cover 164 square miles, and extends not merely over the previously existing swampy ground of the Chagres Valley, but it has risen so far above the floor of the lowlands as to extend for miles between the hills, forming estuaries, lagoons, and ponds, turning rapid, unnavigable streams into deep, sluggish rivers, and converting hilltops into beautiful islands, some of them miles in length, while thousands of acres of flooded and fallen timber, into which stretch or circle narrow necks of land, practically defy any accurate estimate of the secalled shore-line of the new lake.

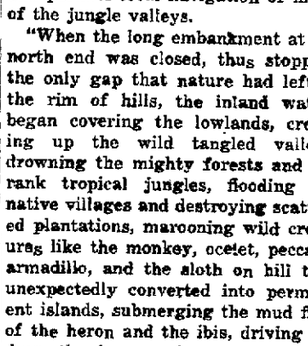

"No one yet accurately knows the size and shape of the new lake. Much of its far-reaching, irregular surface is veiled by whole forests which break through its waters, a dying jungle-barrier to a knowledge of the inland sea. When these obstructing forests and bushes are at last destroyed by the warm waters of the flood and permanent fringes of bamboo and other semi-aquatic growths mark the line of the shore, then the heretofore half shrouded lake will glisten, near and far, in the tropic lights, while the surrounding shores, each bay and promontory, and the islands, big and little, will stand out sharply defined. It will then be difficult to realize that this lake is the work of man.

"As the lake swelled from a pond into a sea, the Indians of Panama saw all their notions of inland navigation swept by the board. They had been accustomed to poling or paddling in the swiftest streams in their cayuca, or dug-out, but they found that no one among them knew how to handle the canoe under the new conditions brought about by the lake.

"The Indians, however, were the least of sufferers caused by the magic appearance of the lake. There are forests of fine tree slowly dying, as is a luxurious mass of jungle plant-life. On many of the trees are great pendant termtie nests filled with restless ant-like creatures doomed to slow starvation. And, besides, many animals have suffered the fate of being marooned and slowly starved. The coming of the lake has worked a considerable damage upon the life that was there before, but, unlike the changes wrought in European geography, this change will be permanent, its utility, its comfort to a readjusted plant and animal world, and its tropical beauties, in all liklihood, will be lasting on through many rearrangements of imperial boundaries."

TO SAFEGUARD LIVES ON LAKE BOATS.

Cleveland, Sept. 10.—A committee of supervising inspectors of the United States Steamboat Inspection Service met here today to begin an investigation of the service on the Great Lakes. ONE YEAR AGO THE GERMAN ARMY WAS ROUTED IN FRANCE

After Getting Within Sight of Paris The Invaders Hurled Back In Disorder

General Joffre's Brillianet Manuevers Turn the Tide of Fight Which Come Upon the Nation When Unprepared —Review of Correspondent.

BY WILLIAM PHILIP SIMMS
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Paris, Sept. 10, 1914.—The German army is in full retreat. The allied forces are everywhere victorious. After getting within sight of Paris and when it seemed that nothing on earth could stop their drive, the invaders have been hurled back in disorder and the capital is safe.

With a recklessness bordering on impudence, the result of seeing fortress after fortress surrender merely before the menace of their approach, the Prussians ignored the reserves they must have known were massed here, turned eastward from Paris expecting to crush a weak and routed enemy. In so doing they uncovered their right and General Maunoury struck. Surprised, dazed almost, they turned to face the new enemy when again they were hit on the flank, this time by General French, of the British; Franchet d'Esperey, of the Fifth; Foch of the Ninth Reserves, and the rest.

Von Kluck and Von Buelow, commanding the German right, were staggered. They fought desperately and tried to rally their armies but Foch, teacher of tactics at St. Cyr, the French West Point, outmaneuvered them, drove a murderous wedge into their lines an dsent them back almost in panic under a storm of French 75 shells.

The German "battle without a tomorrow," has failed. The morrow is here and with it signal defeat. The Battle of the Marne is over and the French have won.

In Paris the news was hailed as the announcement of a miracle. Each day some 40,000 or 50,000f people had abandoned the city, expecting the immediate entrance of the Germans. It was known that the kaiser's legions were near and advancing 20 and 30 miles a day. The French and British seemed powerless to check them and an irredeemable disaster appeared inevitable.

To the few, however, sharing the confidence of General Joseph Joffre, the French commander-in-chief, the victory is gratifying but not surprising. It comes as the logical result of his plans made immediately after Charleroi.

When war was declared Joffre knew he would have to face what the Germans called a "brusked attack." Just where this would come he had no idea. Adopting one of Napoleon's maxims "to engage everywhere, then see'," he spread out his men and endeavored to obtain contact with the enemy. The mass move came through Belgium and Luxembourg, the point least expected, with the result that Joffre's reserves were a long way off. Greatly outnumbered and without sufficinet time to bring up reinforcements, Joffre, who felt the enemy's strength at Charleroi, determined to fall back towards his reserves while his reserves advanced to meet him. Furthermore he profited by the lessons of 1870 which were distinctly to effect that conquered territory may be redeemed but a beaten army ends all hope. No matter what happened, he resolved to keep the armies intact; to refuse all offers of battle until such a time as he deemed the chances were in his favor. Not even to save Paris would he allow himself to engage in a decisive struggle if he felt the moment had not come.

Hoping the favorable moment might come somewhere along the Champagne tablelands, Joffre started the formation of a new army at Ameins. This was the Ninth army, under General Maunoury. The trains transporting this army moved only at night and, I am told by staff officers, the Germans were not aware of its formation.

But the German advance was too rapid. The new army was not more than half formed when Amiens had to be abandoned. Lille, Arras and most of Northern France was overrun so, again by night the army of Maunoury hastened back to Paris where its enrollment was completed.

September 3 the Germans were in sight of the capital. ... was a few miles to the ... while their line continued on southeastward, eastward and northeastward. Uhlan patrols reached ... to the southeast of Paris and ... a few miles of the ... to the northwest.

The German general staff had to decide whether they would take Paris immediately or ... army which they believed to be demoralized, routed and incapable of serious opposition. They chose the latter alternative—the only proper one from a military point of view, for, with the allied army crushed Paris would fall like ripe fruit into the first hand that shook the tree.

So, instead of continuing directly southward and entering Paris, Von Kluck's army in conjunction with Von Buelow's army turned eastward to deliver the knockout blow.

Joffre's longed-looked-for minute had come. His air scouts reported thatVon Kluck's masses had faced the east and that Von Buelow's were pouring across the Marne at many points. He sent for Sir John French, commanding the British. The British, in the forest of Crecy and extending eastward toward Coulommiers, would kepe in touch with the Fifth army under d'Esperey. Other army commanders were ordered to begin their attack at dawn September 6. Joffre, in his order of the day, concluding with:

"An army which can no longer advance, must hold; and if it can not hold, must die."

At daybreak on the 6th Maunoury's reserves struck, full in Von Kluck's flank. Evidently the latter's intelligence department had failed signally.

Had he known of the presence of Maunoury's army in and north of Paris, and at least eight divisions strong, he would not have dared turn his flank to it the way he did. I am told he thought, as did Von Buelow, that there was only one army in Paris and that it would be held for the capital's defense. As a matter of fact there were two—the army of Paris and the army of Maunoury.

In the meantime the British, with five infantry divisions and five brigades of cavalry, were moving northeastward with comparatively little resistance. By night they had reached a position astride the Grand Morin, their right being at Dagny, on the Aubetin River.

Further east the fighting had been much hotter for here it was a frontal attack. D'Esperey had to carve his way forward and he did not get far on the 6th. He had against him the bulk of Von Kluck's army; the Westphalians, Hanoverians and Brandenburghers. Foch, with his Ninth reserves, east of d'Esperey not only had Von Buelow opposing him but the right wing of Von Hauson's Saxons. The Duke of Wurtemberg met attack with attack when Langle's Fourth army struck at him near Vitry and did his best to break through. The result was a standstill fight.

Sarrail, around Verdun, had been less lucky, for the German Crown Crown Prince and the Crown Prince of Bavaria struck with all their might hoping to take Verdun, the forts along the Heights of the Meuse and so turn the French right. They gained some ground, though they failed in their greater task.

On the 7th the fighting was resumed more fiercely tha never. Maunoury's flanking movement went forward with a dash and the British were carried along with it. The plateaus along the River Ourcq were piled high with German dead. Elsewhere, despite desperate attacks the French merely held their own.

The 8th seems to have been the critical day. Maunoury kept up his advance with the British on his right while Foch saw the opening for his wedge. During the night he continued his manouvres so that at dawn on the 9th he was pounding away at a large gap between Von Hausen and Von Buelow, at the same time, with his left he, too struck at Von Buelows right, uncovered by Maunoury and the British.

The retreat of Von Beulow imposes. Caught in a pocket only a rapid retirement could save him and his army. This he did very cleverly. Staff officers declare only a genius could have extricated himself, for, at times, under violent shell fire from the French 3-inch rapid-fire field pieces, his troops showed signs of panic.

The retreat of Von Kluck was followed by that of Von Buelow and the other commanders eastward to the Voges. The German army is expected to make a stand on the Aisne, north of which a high tableland offers what is considered one of the greatest defenses in Europe. Unless they hold there it is believed they will lose all they have gained.

THE SOUTH BEND MALLEABLE RANGE

Buy One This Week and get the Ware FREE

ONE CENT A MEAL FOR ONE YEAR.

In almost every house there are practically one thousand meals a year prepared on the stove. Many people hesitate about paying five or ten dollars more to secure a reliable range—one that will cook these thousand meals a year with the least trouble and at the lowest cost. If you should add one cent to the cose of every meal for the first year only, you would soon make up the difference between the cheap range and the range that will last a lifetime.

Suppose your cheap range uses one cents more of fuel in cooking each meal, or only three cents' worth more a day. In one year this range has cost you ten dollars extra—ten dollars more for fuel than the better range. Every year, means that much more money burned up.

Suppose the better range does cost ten dollars more at first than the cheap one. The extra cost is nothing—it amounts to only one cent a meal. It will save you one cent a meal in fuel alone. In one year it will save the extra cost, and in ten years it will save you one hundred dollars, not counting what you save missing big repair bills.

You can open a bank account in your kitchen by buying a South Bend Malleable Range.

An expert demonstrator from the factory will be at our store for one week. He will tell you about the Patented Aluminum-Fused Copper-Bearing Flues. And prove to you why it is the best range made.

Several showers during the day would not permit the carrying out of the complete program.

The trap shoot at the Athletic Park at two o'clock resulted in the following score:

Leib	97
L. Daugherty	96
H. Daugherty	94
Kittelberger	93
Way	90

The ball game between Mahaffey Curwensville at three o'clock was called in the first of the fifth inning on account of rain. The score at that time was Mahaffey, 3; Curwensville 1.

Both Madden and Strickland were doing good work and well supported with the exception of several errors made by Curwensville. The largest crowd of the season had turned out to see the game. The band concerts in the main part of town throughout the day were also heard by large crowds.

A hamburg supper will be held in the Presbyterian Church by the ladies of that church nert Thursday evening, starting at five o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Gardlock and Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Porter arrived in Curwensville the first of the week to make a short visit wth Mr. Garlock's and Mr. Porter's parents.

On September 2d, Paul Byron Gardlock and Miss Lola Owers, of Bayard, West Virginia, were married and on the same date J. Blair Porter and Miss Mary Boring, also of Bayard, were united in marriage.

Mr. Gardlock and Mr. Porter have been employed by the Luden Bridge Company in West Virginia for some time.

Miss Evana Dale and Miss Margaret Hile, both graduates of the Curwensville high school, left this morning for West Chester, Pa., where they will attend the normal school. This is Miss Dale's second year at West Chester.

James Sterling who has been employed on the Watts farm near Curwensville the past year left yesterday morning for Williamsport, where he will enter Dickinson Seminary.

Lex Bailey, who has been employed by the Luden Bridge Company in Kentucky, left this morning for West Virginia, where he has been transferred, after several days visit with his parents near Curwensville.

NEW FALL BLOUSES REVIEWED BY MISS MARGARET MASON

Unique Models of Stunning Waistshade of Combination of Materials

BY MARGARET MASON

Written for the United Press

"Is it a waste, the maiden said,
To buy a lovely waist of red,
That's made of many yards of mull?"
Sure such a waist full can't be wasteful.

New York, Sept. 10.—The new fall blouses are rightly designated for few and far between are the females who won't fall for them. Such exquisitness is their as has never been before or behind either for they are much ornamented in the rear.

They are more bouffant for one thing and require divers lengths of diaphonons material to complete their sheer entirety. Georgette crepe, chiffon, and crepe de chine continue to be the favorite materials. Fur, lace and metalic embroideries are the favord garnishments.

One unique model of white crepe de chine is absolutely plain in front with a deep sailor collar of white silk plush in the back that is edged with a fringe of sassy little black and white ermine tails. The long sleeves are caught together at the cuff with a single tiny tail and there you are—the tail of this blouse is ended.

A stunning blous for an elderly woman, (if there is any such thing) is of grey chiffon and black lace with a banding of skunk around the neck and down each side of the front to the bust line. The sleeves which have a cap top of lace and full undersleeves of the chiffon are cuffed in the fur. The lace is set in the back to form a point from the shoulders to the waist line and in front extends from the shoulders straight down each side of the fur bands.

Combinations of materials and of two colors are distinctly smart. Of those that seek their contrasting color in fur the white waists combined with skunk and the yellow with skung are perhaps the loviest.

Chiffon and velvet waists are also rich and effective. A Russian green velvet waist with sleeves and yoke of the same shade of chiffon has for sole adornment a choker collar of bear with a greenish gold metalic rose snugling coyly on the left side.

A vivid striped velvet of grey, black scarlet and yellow has a high collar of astrakan and the long flaring bell sleeves are deeply banded with the same.

The colored waists of Jersey silk promise but a dubious following for fall although the fur trimmed sweaters of heavy wool or silk have been shaken off of the summer gull's fair shoulders only to descend gracefully and fittingly upon Miss Autumn. They are sure to be decidely smart wel lup into November for wear with tailor made skirts of serve, velvet and even taffeta. For yes, taffeta is to be a fall fabric this year as well as a perennial spring one.

Quite the cleverest of the tailored coat suits are fashioned of this silk and combined with fur to give them a bit more stability.

Altough military styles and trench fashions are trying to retrench they have suffered almost a total defeat in the autumn mode encounters.

With the exception of the prevalence of Russian coats, turbanded and full skirted a la Cossack, and a gleaming gold tassel or so a la Belgian officer little or no militarism has been allowed to gain headway against the lines of the allied a la modes.

It certainly brooks much for fashionable peace that the awful slaught of military helmets, turbans, Highland bonnets ad Belgian caps has been stayed and female headgear is once more staid again also. That is of course it is as circumspect as feminine head gear could ever be. Really very little exaggeration is shown as yet in the fall hat models and either the close fitting little round and tricorn shapes of velvet are effected or the ultra large round floppy velvet shapes. A one color scheme has gripped the little hat and add and bizarre shades have been evolved to meet the needs of a one toned hat that will at the same time be sufficiently striking.

Royal purple, mahogany and a bright Prussian blue are a few of the colors used and a variation on the ever popular cerise is also offered. So vivid are some of the hues that it is going to be mighty hard for more man to pass the hats this fall without adding blinders to his other recenny acquired fashionable accessory, the wrist watch.

EXPECTS GERMANY'S APPROVAL OF [illegible]

(By United Press)

Berlin, Sept. 10.—Germany confidently expects America's approval on the Arabic note handed to Ambassador Gerard Monday night for transmission to America. They believe the contention that the U. boat commander expected to be rammed by the White Star liner and fired his torpedo in defense will meet with a favorable reception both in America and in Germany. The German people will regard it with favor, officials believe, since they have felt all along that submarine activities must not be curtailed because of the inroads submarines have made on the British sea power.
